*Every culture in every century
has seen the devastation of epidemics
like cholera, typhoid and yellow fever*

– until the advent of modern plumbing.

By installing running water and sanitary plumbing systems in homes in the entire urban population, and building the water treatment plants to clean our water – plumbers have saved more lives than doctors.

The plumbers of the Illinois Pipe Trades spend thousands of hours in the classroom and on the job, training to understand today's complex facilities and their water supply systems. They continue their education throughout their careers – earning certifications that offer specialized expertise. No one else can guarantee that level of training of an entire workforce!

Public agencies must hire the best plumbing professionals available, because their job is to protect the health of the public. Facility managers must hire the best plumbing professionals available, because their job is to protect their workers, and residents must hire the best plumbing professionals available, because their job is to protect their families.

The piping professionals of the Illinois Pipe Trades must train their workforce to be the best – because they're protecting ALL of you!

The Illinois Pipe Trades...
BETTER TRAINING for a safer America.
